

SEMI-WEEKLY INTERIOR JOURNAL.

VOL. XXI.

STANFORD, KY., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1893.

NO. 71

WILLIAMSBURG, WHITLEY COUNTY.

—Pet Wiesner came down from London and spent Sunday at his father's.

—Several Masons from here attended Mr. E. Y. McKeehan's funeral at Corbin Sunday.

—The town board of trustees has placed the town levy at 20c on the $100 for next year.

—Mr. Sam Jennings had his arm badly injured last Friday while loading logs at Pleasant View.

—Rev. J. M. Prestidge, of the Baptist church, filled the pulpit at the Congregational church Sunday night.

—Elder R. H. Robertson's meeting at the Christian church continues with increasing interest. There have been three additions.

—A picnicking party spent last Wednesday on Morgan mountain, where plenty of chestnuts can be had and the country for miles around can be seen.

—The Kentucky Lumber Co.'s mill sawed out Tuesday. They will be able to give most of their men employment shipping lumber, repairing the mill, &c. until they can get more logs.

—Mr. G. W. Chambers and his mother were going to Pine Knot, last week, and as they were ascending a steep hill about five miles below town the horse began to back and if the buggy had not lodged against a tree all would have gone over a cliff about 60 feet high. No serious damage was done but Mr. C. and his mother received quite a scare.

—Mr. P. D. Whitsett has returned from Pennsylvania and thinks he will be able to begin to open his new mines about the 1st of December. Miss Sarah Harman and Mr. Wm. Bowman are both quite ill with typhoid fever. Messrs. Hubble and Kubanks, of Garrard county, are here trading a car-load of mares for mules. Mr. J. C. Criswell went to Madison county Tuesday with a drove of cattle. Mrs. Dr. Adkins is visiting her old home at Campbellsburg. Miss Flora Moore is visiting at Broadhead this week.

BROADHEAD.

—Misses Belle and Lena Coulter, of Middleburg, are visiting Mrs. J. H. Albright.

—Wm. Cummings, who left this country a year ago to make a fortune in the far West, has returned to his old home and says that this country will do him.

—Mrs. Sarah Leak, an old lady reported to have been 106 years old, died on the night of the 27th ult. at the home of Wm. Roberts. Her death was caused from general debility.

—Miss Dollie Turpin, one of Broadhead's belles, has gone to Berea to remain for a few weeks and she leaves one of our tall men with a heart trouble.

—Mr. Wm. Albright, of Barbourville, is visiting Mr. H. L. Tharp.

—Elder W. E. Ellis, of Stanford, is holding a series of meetings this week at the Christian church and in his sermon on last Tuesday night he got very close to some of the members of this church and we do hope they will heed the warning voice.

—The baseball game played here between the Mt. Vernon nine and the Broadhead boys resulted, Mt. Vernon 51, Broadhead 35. It was a quiet, nice game as far as disputes were concerned. The Mt. Vernon nine won the respect and praise of our people and their return will be welcomed.

—Miss Viola's Circus, Theatrical and Minstrel Show has been holding forth at this place for about four or five days. Notwithstanding those who have attended pronounce it a good show, we learn that they have not been able to pay expenses since they have been in this town. This speaks well for our people.

—Last Saturday night Bill Newcomb and Robert Payne met in A. G. Talbot's grocery and very soon engaged in a fight in which it is claimed that Newcomb got the best of Payne. They were separated, but very soon got together again and Newcomb took Payne's pistol from him and knocked him down and was beating him over the head and face at a terrible rate when some one stabbed Newcomb in the back. He was cut with a dirk knife, about six inches in the blade, and the knife was left sticking in his back and remained there until he had run about 150 yards. It was unknown at first who cut Newcomb, but George Reynolds is now accused of the act and has been arrested in Louisville on that charge, though we think it very doubtful who did it. Reynolds' conduct since the affair may implicate him as the guilty man. It has been thought that Newcomb would die, but at this writing he is said to be improving. Bug juice was the cause of the row.

Dr. Appleman, the specialist, will be at the Myers House, next Tuesday and until noon Wednesday to meet his many patients. The doctor's practice is large here and he is giving universal satisfaction.

—The Republic rammed the transport Rio de Janeiro which was conveying 1,100 troops to Santos, and 500 of the troops were drowned. Admiral Mello confirms the truth of this report.

LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

—The union meeting will be held at the Baptist church Sunday evening.

—R. H. Batson has purchased Col. D. R. Collier's residence on Lexington street.

—Local fishermen say that the fish are biting in Dix river as fast as one can throw in.

—A. G. Scott is erecting a large paint factory on Richmond street. He will build a residence on Depot street.

—Batson & West will put a stock of groceries and hardware in the store-room adjoining their new building.

—D. M. Lackey has returned from a visit to relatives in Indiana. Young Mr. Stuart, of Crab Orchard, has accepted a position in Batson & West's store.

—Hon. John Augustus Williams is here this week delivering lectures to the local Masonic Lodge. Saturday night he will deliver a free lecture at the Court-house, his subject being "Secrets of Masonry."

—The walls on the Miller brick hotel which were damaged by the fire are being covered with a heavy coat of cement. The other repairs to the building are nearly completed and it will be run as a hotel by Mr. E. A. Pascoe.

—About a half dozen couples of young folks went persimmon hunting Wednesday. Each took a basket of edibles and a fine dinner was spread. John Farra was along and not many baskets full of crumbs were picked up after the feast.

—Canor Roberts, who was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at the last term of court, has decided not to take his case to the Court of Appeals and has been taken to Frankfort. He killed the deputy jailer of Madison two years ago.

—A protracted meeting is in progress at the Baptist church conducted by Rev. J. A. Booth, of Taylorsville, and the regular pastor, T. H. Campbell. Services are held at 10 A. M. and 7 P. M. The meeting will continue during next week and all are invited to attend.

—The oldest inhabitant does not remember when so little interest was manifested in an election as in the coming one. No one seems to know or care much how it goes. Now if things will just remain this way until after next Tuesday we will all stand and sing the long metre doxology.

—Circuit Clerk Will Mason has received a patent right machine to be used in selecting juries. It consists of a large wheel with a door in which the names are placed. The wheel is then turned and the names drawn in Louisiana lottery style. Mr. Mason has the machine on exhibition at his office and cheerfully answers all questions.

DANVILLE.

(Advocate.)

—The wife of Capt. W. J. Gray, of the West End, died last week, aged 40.

—Linney & Perry, confectioners, have assigned; assets and liabilities small.

—The Georgetown College eleven will be here Saturday to play a championship game with the Centres.

—Farris & Whitley sold to J. S. Armstrong 35 900 pound cattle at 3¢ and to Curry & Ramsey, of Garrard, 50 that would average 1,125 pounds, at 3¢. They bought of Burke Bros. 60 do., 1,400 pounds, at 4 cents.

—Mr. J. M. Sallee, the well-known young farmer, and Miss Zna Baughman, daughter of Mrs. S. O. Baughman, were married Wednesday afternoon. Both are unusually fortunate in having secured such desirable helpmates.

—A. E. Hundley sold to J. C. Johnson 25 hogs, weight 214 pounds, at 5¢. John and Homer Baughman sold to Dick Gentry a pair of good 16-hand horse mules for $220. Leander Davison bought of Erasmus Dunn 36 head of 1,150-pound feeders at 3¢.

—The protracted meeting at the Christian church, owing to encouraging signs may be continued throughout this week. There have been nearly 30 additions to the congregations. The meeting at the Fork church is still in progress and is meeting with success. Eleven converts were immersed in Dix river Monday afternoon.

The Duty of Lincoln Democrats to Vote for Miller
(Editor Interior Journal.)

The writer is not a citizen of Lincoln county, but a democrat and voter in this senatorial district and desires very much the election of a democratic senator.

Casey, Boyle and Garrard are pretty equally divided between the two parties. Lincoln county has a large democratic majority and can control the election. The balance of the district conceded to the democrats of Lincoln the right to name the democratic nominee. They have presented in their candidate a lawyer of ability, one who will make the district an able representative and one who as their nominee is entitled to a large majority in Lincoln county. Can the democrats of Lincoln in justice to their brother democrats in the balance of the district, fail to give it to him?

JUSTICE.

—The day after the World's Fair closed 48,275 people paid the admission fee.

MIDDLEBURG.

—The dry weather continues.

—Jefferson Short has moved his saw mill to Yosemite.

—Misses Belle and Lena Coulter are at Broadhead visiting Mrs. J. M. Albright. Mrs. Sally Murphy, of Kingsville, is on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. T. S. Benson.

—It is reported that ere many moons wax and wane a young official of this county will wed one of our sweetest sixteeners, and in advance of the happy event we extend hearty congratulations and wish them a happy journey through life.

—G. W. Jeter and J. W. McWhorter, Jr., returned from the World's Fair Friday. It is right amusing to hear Mr. Jeter tell how clever he was treated and how a gentleman presented him with a nice pair of bracelets and furnished him lodging free gratis.

—J. W. McWhorter, Sr., has bought of J. K. Coffey the water mill here for $2,500. This mill has been in the Coffey family for more than 40 years and it is a great wonder that Mr. Coffey was willing to part with it. Mr. M. will attach an engine to it, and grind the year round instead of a few months in winter and spring.

—In writing the article about J. C. Lay some issues since we had no thought of offending the whole republican party and indeed it was not our intention to offend any one. As many of the republicans had been saying hard things about Mr. L., we thought it would not be out of place to say that he was a very common common school teacher, though perhaps that was stronger language than was becoming in us to use in speaking of a brother teacher, and we hereby withdraw whatever may have seemed offensive. And we can say that Mr. Lay has a fair reputation as a teacher, but do not think that he is egotistical enough to think himself above the ordinary of the profession of teaching, or to think that he can be elected to the State Senate.

ROWLAND.

—Hade Shanks is an expert bicyclist. On Thursday evening he rode his wheel to Stanford to get an INTERIOR JOURNAL and after stopping at the office for several minutes and conversing with friends on the streets, returned here in 18 minutes.

—Of course the cranky Prendergast should be hung for murdering Mayor Harrison for failing to give him a position which he had promised him, but something should be done with these high officials who make promises which they never fulfill. Killing is too bad, but their insidious schemes should be told to the public and let it pass on them at the polls.

—Mrs. G. W. Goodrich and her little son, Willie, have gone to Virginia to visit relatives. Miss Susan Vanhook, of Broadhead, visited Mrs. J. H. Hilton, this week. Miss Kate Roach, of Corbin, is visiting Mrs. Nannie Chappell. Mrs. J. E. Woodyard, of Broadhead, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Hilton. Miss Annie Ashlock is visiting in Lancaster. Miss Mag Stevens will move to Somerset soon if reports are true. John Orndoff is ill of typhoid fever. J. W. Carrier, J. W. Flowers and J. R. Orndoff went fox hunting. Orndoff became excited over his dog, "Spot," and was left in the wilderness. He is still roaming at large. Mr. A. G. Harris, of Lebanon Junction, is visiting Mr. Sam Dudderar and looking after personal interests. W. S. Knox, of Danville, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. Stephens. Miss Sallie Dudderar is book-keeper at I. Hamilton & Son's store.

—As the election comes off Tuesday we indulge in the fond hope that the democrats will so organize as to insure a good majority for our worthy candidates and the sound principles which they represent. If you don't like the man just think of your own weak points and swallow the pill. Remember that you are voting for principles and not for men. Don't refuse to take the medicine because you don't like it, but take it for its healing properties and for the good of the system. No man is worthy the name of a democrat who sulks in camp or seeks to injure the party for his own gain or on account of some personal dislike. No man is large enough to be allowed this privilege. The sickly cry of the bolter that there is no politics in a given race is both absurd and disgusting. It is a mere pretext to knife some one in the back. The lines should be clearly drawn from constable to president or some impurity will be found in the higher offices; just as the brooks and rivulets must be pure to keep corruption from the larger streams of water.

SADLY'S QUERY TO INGERSOLL.—This beautiful song (words and music regular sheet music size) will be mailed to anyone enclosing 5c in stamps to D. G. Edwards, General Passenger Agent, C. H. & D. R. R., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—A paper mill at Salina, Kas., is now making paper out of wild sunflower stalks. The paper is pronounced superior to that made of straw.

MATRIMONIAL MATTERS.

—E. J. Woolsey, whose marriage to Mrs. Kate Trimble DeRoode, Covington cut such a figure in swell society, has been sued in New York for $85,000 alleged brokerage debts.

—Mrs. H. J. Poteet requests your presence at the marriage of her granddaughter, Maud Muller Miles, to Charles Wheeler Bell, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 16, at 4 o'clock, Christian church, Harrodsburg, Ky. Thus read invitations received by friends here. Miss Maud is well known in Stanford. Mr. Bell is a teacher in the Harrodsburg High School and is highly thought of.

—The Stanford Bar has received the following vote of thanks: Kind Friends:—It is with fear and trembling that I try in my feeble way to express the deep gratitude I feel at having been made the recipient of the handsome tea service which came to me on my wedding day. My friends were very kind in their loving remembrances on that memorable occasion and I feel that I do not merit such kindness. No present, however, was more highly appreciated than the one which came from the hands of my highly esteemed friends whom I now address. I feel it to be an honor of which I will always be proud and could you but read the feeling of gratitude deep down in my heart, I know you would be satisfied of the high appreciation I feel for having been so kindly remembered. With best wishes from myself and husband. Very Sincerely, Louise Bailey Gregory.

—The marriage of Mr. Will Severance, of this place, and Miss Mary C. Pickett, of Shelby, was celebrated at the residence of the bride's father, Col. James A. Pickett, at high noon Wednesday in the presence of some 40 or more relatives and close friends. The ceremony was performed in the large double parlors, which had been beautifully decorated and festooned, and was said by Eld. Rabelt in a most impressive manner. Miss Anne Shanks was maid of honor and Mr. Joe Severance, Jr., best man. The other attendants were Misses Anne Pickett, Mamie Carithers and Virginia Middleton and W. H. Shanks, Carrol Shanks and Rector Pickett. After the knot had been tied and congratulations showered upon the young couple, the guests were invited to an elegant lunch, which was handsomely spread and greatly enjoyed. At 5 P. M. Mr. and Mrs. Severance left for Louisville and yesterday came to Stanford and will for the present live at Mr. Joe Severance's. The bride is one of the loveliest of women. She is handsome, refined, cultivated and amiable and in winning her Mr. Severance has cause for genuine congratulation. He is himself a most worthy young man. Trained in the nurture and admonition of the Lord by a Christian mother and father, he hasn't on arriving at man's estate departed from it, but has proved fully the promise of Scripture. May heaven's richest blessings ever attend them and prove

That marriage, rightly understood
Gives to the tender and the good

HUSTONVILLE.

—The huntsman, his dog and gun may be seen and heard any time. Quails are plentiful if the gun explosion is evidence.

—Mrs. Nannie Owens, who came over from Cumberland Falls to attend the burial of Mrs. Mary Owens, has returned that place.

—Contracts have been awarded the early building of a vault in Hustonville cemetery; an investment well made and truly indispensable.

—Mr. Walter Greening is erecting an imposing cottage on the Danville pike. Mr. Dave Newburn's new dwelling will be an improvement in that part of town.

—Dr. P. S. Humphrey bought of Mrs. Hattie Bishop the property now occupied by Mrs. Adelia Woods, familiarly known as the post-office. Dr. H. will take possession soon.

—Mr. J. G. Weatherford returned Saturday from Chicago and Cincinnati, having purchased his Christmas goods during his absence. Misses Nannie and Bessie Read, of Danville, are visiting relatives here. Mr. E. C. Hopper, of Latonia, spent several days with friends here. Mr. Porter Stagg, of your city, spent Sunday with his father, Mr. Dan Stagg, who continues quite ill. Miss Florence Marcum, of Pleasantville, is visiting Miss Lulu Edgington. Mr. Sam Lusk is at home from college with a severely sprained ankle.

—The friends of Mr. Perry Land were grieved to receive the shocking announcement of his sudden death. He has been a sufferer from rheumatism. The dreadful disease attacking his heart, caused his untimely death. His remains were placed in the family burial ground near Moreland. He leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss. The community laments the deplorable death and it is impossible to give adequate expression to our deep feelings and assurance of our heartfelt sorrow.

—Mrs. Ferdinand Heim, of St. Louis, fell dead while heartily laughing.

THROUGH SLEEPING CARS

VIA BIG FOUR ROUTE TO THE WORLD'S FAIR.
We all love comfort, especially when traveling, and what a great comfort it is to be able to take a sleeping car to your own home which runs right through to Chicago without change and lands passengers at the entrance gate of the great World's Fair without a single change or transfer of any kind. How can this be accomplished? Why simply by asking your local agent for a ticket via the Big Four Route, which is absolutely the only line running through sleeping cars in connection with the E. T. V. & G. Railway and Queen & Crescent Route direct to the World's Fair Grounds and landing passengers convenient to the World's Fair Hotel District. Through Sleeping Car leaves Macdon 11:15 A. M., Atlanta 2:10 P. M., Rome 4:55 P. M., Chattanooga 7:25 P. M., and arrives at Chicago 5:15 P. M. Ask for tickets via Big Four Route and for further information address D. B. Martin, General Passenger Agent, Cincinnati.

CORBETT AND MITCHELL.

John Wilson Gibbs Compares Their Muscular Development.

He Thinks Corbett the Better Man— Mitchell's Muscles Harder and More Massive Than Corbett's, But Not So Symmetrical.

(COPYRIGHT, 1893.)

CORBETT'S RIGHT.

THE match between James J. Corbett, of America, and Charles Mitchell, of England, for the world's championship having been ratified, a few words relative to the physical attributes of the rival gladiators and a hint ventured as to their respective prospects of success may not be amiss.

I am emboldened to take this step, first, because, as a practicing physician, I have made a special study of the noble animal, man, in all of his anatomical aspects, and second, because an army of friends, who know that I had heretofore made physical examinations of James J. Corbett, John L. Sullivan and other men of equal renown, have requested me to do so, and thereby furnish to the world of sport a clew as to the outcome of such an encounter.

I unhesitatingly predict that the world's championship will abide on this side of the Atlantic. Not that I underestimate Mitchell's powers as a particle. He has been, and is yet in a measure, a fistie marvel. The bold youth who but tipped the beam at one hundred and forty-three pounds and yet had the courage to fight the renowned John L. Sullivan, when that great gladiator was in his prime, must have all the qualities of a wonderful warrior in his composition. Five years later at Chantilly, France, he proved the truth of this assumption when he fought the hitherto invincible Sullivan to a draw, the then champion weighing an even two hundred pounds, thirty-seven more than Mitchell. Then his speed of foot, as well as manual action, cleverness and endurance, saved him from defeat. This much is due to Mitchell.

On the other hand I claim that the Englishman is not, never was and never will be the equal of Corbett in any of the requisites that go to make up the perfect athlete. The American is in fact the ideal man. He is constructed on lines that are indicative of an extraordinary degree of quickness, nimbleness, strength and endurance. In fact Achilles or Apollo, the symmetrical kings of mythology, could not have had stronger or more graceful curves.

Let us take a look at the difference in physical construction of Corbett and Mitchell. Corbett I have measured myself and know his proportions; Mitchell's I have obtained from a friend who has done the same for the English champion. The Californian stands six feet one and one-half inches in height, the Englishman five feet nine and one-quarter inches; Corbett, notwithstanding his great stature, has never weighed over two hundred and six pounds. His present weight is one hundred and ninety-six pounds. Mitchell has weighed as high as two hundred and twenty pounds and now tips the beam at one hundred and ninety, only six pounds less than Corbett's present weight. The Englishman's flesh is soft and valueless, while the American's is hard, spongy and of great value. Mitchell will have to take off at least twenty-five pounds of flesh to get at fighting weight, while Corbett will need to get rid of but eight or ten. The effect on one may be debilitating (as witness the case of John L. Sullivan when he attempted a great weight reduction), the effect on the other can only be exhilarating. Too great flesh reduction on an athlete within a stipulated time (which is generally too short) is dangerous to success. It is likely to impair his stamina as well as strength. With an ordinary citizen flesh reduction is not as a rule detrimental, he generally takes a longer time than the athlete to make the desired physical improvement and besides does not enter into a contest in which every nerve of the body is strained to the utmost tension. When Corbett fought Sullivan he was two inches larger at the chest than the Boston man. He then measured forty-four inches and three inches was five inches, three inches greater than that of the ex-champion. Corbett is bigger and stronger now and will have correspondingly greater advantages. His weight will be about one hundred and eighty-six and Mitchell's one hundred and sixty-five. When both get to those respective fighting weights it will be found that Corbett will be far larger at the chest and neck where the breathing power comes in.

It will be only in the arms that Mitchell will be anything near as good as the Californian and that will be only at in-fighting. Corbett's arms are, of course, much longer and at out-fighting he must necessarily have the advantage, especially as he is (in my opinion) speedier, shifter and cleverer than the Briton. Mitchell has a splendid pair of powerful arms. In fact they are too strong at the point where they adjoin the shoulders, hence the frequent breakings of his hands when he enters a great contest.

Corbett's muscles on the other hand are of the long, flexible kind and when he brings his forearms up there are no bulging knots of them between the elbow and the shoulder such as wrestlers, oarsmen and professional "strong men" are wont to have. His muscles, however, are so generously distributed through every portion of his body that he would be a dangerous opponent at any kind of game where strength is required.

Mitchell is strong at various portions of his rugged body, but most especially so, as I have said, in the arms and shoulders. He has big bunches at these points like a wrestler. These are not very good for a fighter, where ease of motion and flexibility are far more essential than mere strength. It would not surprise me to see Mitchell become muscle bound in time.

At three points Corbett and Mitchell have the same measurement. They are: Forearm, 13 inches; thigh, 27 1/2 inches; calf, 16 1/2 inches. Mitchell's right bicep (contracted) is just half an inch longer than Corbett's, measuring an even 16 inches.

Now for a final reason why I believe that Corbett must win. I have shown as well as I possibly could his natural advantages, height, might, reach, speed and cleverness. There is another equally important; youth must be served. Corbett is twenty-seven years of age; Mitchell thirty-two. The Californian has led a careful, abstemious life, while the Briton has been a pretty gay boy. Necessarily his powers must be somewhat impaired. He has done no fighting or even boxing since he met John L. Sullivan at Chantilly in 1887. It is only reasonable to assume that he has "gone back."

In those same five years Corbett has met a score of fighters, among them being Joe Choynski, Jake Kilrane, Dominick McCaffray, Peter Jackson and John L. Sullivan. He whipped them all but Jackson and there he was given a "draw" and cheated out of the decision, when he had the big Australian all but out.

He has come up, as sportsmen put it, and he will go up still higher when he has added Charles Mitchell, of England, to his triumphant list. That he will do in about thirty rounds, for the English champion is game to his heart's core and will die as hard as did the old guard at Waterloo.

A TIME TO "SAW WOOD."

Wise Men Say Nothing and Look About for Chances.

It is the man who industriously "saws wood" who arrives at the objective point with the greatest degree of certainty. It is the individual who is always getting ready to make money who does most of the talking in the world. The man who is never seen on the street corners discussing grave public questions is the one who is making the best of the situation and is doing something to keep his wheels moving. If he has steady employment, he does his work as well as he can, tries to make good use of his income, and finds that he has no time for grumbling.

If he is dependent upon his own efforts for the employment of his time, he is looking around for the main chance, knowing full well in times like these that the man who "saws wood" is most likely to come out at the head of the procession when the agitation is at an end and those who have taken their time to do the talking finally turn their attention to business. This does not apply to that class of curbstone prophets who are never known to toil, spin or look with favor upon anything save an invitation to drown their sorrows at the nearest bar. Then we always have with us Sunshine and shadow alike find them busy at their calling. The public welfare has little interest in their going or coming.

But there are thousands to-day who would better serve their own best interests, and the good of the community as well, if they would use whatever means they have, together with their best energies, and would bottle up their wisdom on the questions which are supposed to be delegated to the statesmen at Washington, and to those who make a business, and money, by educating the public, and get to work. A little money will go far now in buying, but the time is passing when anything will go far. The time is passing when the wise man can afford to be idle. City Journal.

AN APE FEEDS RATS.

He Made Pots of the Rodents and Supplied Them with Potatoes.

Not far from the cage of the two bears at the Zoo, Roxy, the big ape, is confined. Two weeks ago Roxy was a well satisfied and amiable ape, but now he is morose and acts very much like a person with a vigorous case of indigestion. The reason for this is because he has lost his playmates, says the Philadelphia Record.

Head Keeper Byrne noticed several months ago that the rats displayed a decided preference for Roxy. They ran all about the floor of his cage, hid in the straw, and did not seem to be a bit afraid of him.

In fact, the good-natured fellow has often been seen to take one of the little visitors up in his arms and soothe and pet it as tenderly as a mother would an ailing child. But the attraction was something the keepers could not fathom, so a close watch was kept on his movements.

Every day for dinner Roxy is fed a peck or so of boiled sweet potatoes. Directly after dinner one day the mystery was explained. Roxy broke off the ends of all his sweet potatoes and tossed them about the floor of his cage. In less than two minutes a dozen or more rats were inside having a good meal.

Steps were taken to abate the nuisance. A big wire trap was baited with toasted cheese and other dainties so toothsome to the average rodent. But it was no use, because Roxy insisted on feeding them the succulent sweet potato, and the trap remained untenanted. Therefore the big fellow's sweet potato supply was withheld one day, and a liberal supply placed in the trap. That night Roxy's screams were heard in the remotest ends of the gardens, and the trap became so full of rats that the door refused to shut.

Every time one of the doomed rats approached the tempting trap, Roxy shook the bars of his cage and shrieked with fury. He did everything in the world he could to warn his little friends, but they all took the fatal step. The trap was kept there for several days, and now Roxy is alone in his misery.

Superintendent Brown has given an order for a rubber rat to be constructed, and if this does not take the place of the lost pet Roxy will be given a place where he will be close to a cage of monkeys, and it is thought their antics will be sufficient to keep his mind off his recent loss.

Mozart and Others.

An artist should consider facts about the masters of his profession calmly and thoughtfully. He may reach valuable conclusions about himself. A certain musical composer of much talent and popularity—we will call him Smithkins—has a happy appreciation of his own work, as his friends all know.

So highly does he estimate Smithkins' compositions that some of his friends were much startled the other day when he said gravely: "Did you ever notice that the names of all the great composers begin with M?"

"M!" ejaculated his astonished audience.
"Yes, M," said the composer. "Mozart, Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer, Moszkowski—and Me!"

Reason Enough.

The ingenuity of children in getting up new and extraordinary "games" has been an astonishment to mothers in all generations.

Little Billy came in one afternoon from an assembly of the children of the neighborhood with his clothes pierced above and below with a great many little holes.

"For pity's sake!" exclaimed his mother, "what has happened to you?"
"Oh," said Billy, "we've only been playing grocery store, and everybody was putting things in it, and I was the Swiss cheese!"

CHAPTER III.

MY FAIRY PRINCE.

I name him as he appeared to me in the two hours that followed. He came like the benign spirit of some old fairy tale, bearing to me bright promise for the future. Now, when long years have passed, with all the full, strange record with which this narrative deals, I can think of the hour and the man in no other way. It was my hour of promise—he was my fairy prince.

"Bostock!" said my father, holding out his hand, "Little Prince Bostock? Why, it don't seem possible."

"Yes, that reminds me, Amos, of how we used to wrestle, side hold. You used to throw me."

"I don't think I could do it now," said my father.

"I reckon not, Amos. Well, my old chum, I'm mighty glad to see you. Will you believe it, Amos?—being in Boston for the very first time since I went south, the thought struck me to come up here, and hunt up old friends and schoolmates. There's few of them left; and I'm right glad I've found you."

"I feel flattered by your remembrance and your kindness, Pierce. It's but a poor hospitality I have to offer you; but you're welcome to it. Come to the house, and we'll sit down and talk over old days."

"We'll have to talk fast, Amos. I've mortgaged my time at the north, and I must leave Boston to-morrow. I can give you two hours only. This is your boy, eh?—fine manly fellow. What's his name?—Dorr? Why, is it possible you called him after my father?"

"Indeed I did, Pierce. You remember how kind he was to me. The boy's name is Dorr Bostock Jewett."

"Now I like that; I'll not forget it. Come along to the house as you said."

His beaming smile captivated me; as we walked along, while he busily talked with my father, he playfully shouldered my hoe, and took hold of my hand. Arrived at the house, my mother was introduced.

It was the first exhibition of high-bred politeness I had ever seen, and it impressed me. In the life that I had been living, duty and labor went for everything, courtesy was scant enough. Mr. Bostock removed his hat, gently took my mother's hand, and bowed very low.

"Extremely glad to meet you, madam. Your husband is my oldest and dearest friend, though I've seen nothing of him since we were mere lads."

"Sit down, sir, and make yourself comfortable," said my mother. "Will you stay to tea?"

"Thank you—I shall not have time," he replied, looking at a massive-cased gold watch. "The train leaves the village at seven; it's almost five now."

"If you were raised in New Hampshire, perhaps you haven't forgotten how to eat mush and milk."

"Why, bless me, madam, can you give me a bowl of it? My old nigger cooks get up corn bread, corn cake and all kinds of corn fixings, but they can't make mush. I'd like it above all things."

With a napkin under his fat chin, our jolly guest sat at the table, partaking with evident relish of the simple entertainment that was set before him. He was a keen observer, notwithstanding his easy, careless way, and I think that nothing had escaped his notice. Never had the house and its furnishings seemed as shabby to me as now.

"Beg pardon, Amos; but you know everything is permitted between old friends. You don't thrive well here."

"No," said my father, "and I fear I never shall. You remember something about this old place; twenty acres out of the thirty no better than a stone quarry. Bad luck has followed me; I've had bad seasons, slim crops, sickness and debt. It's a hard struggle, almost a hopeless one."

"I'm sorry for you, Amos; from the bottom of my soul I am. I don't know of a fellow who deserved good fortune ahead of you. If you'd struck out when I did, you'd have succeeded anywhere. New England is a good place to rear men, but no place at all for them to spread, you know. I don't brag, but I've got a right to point with some pride to what I've done since I saw these hills last."

"You are at the south, I infer," said my father.

"I've one thousand acres of the best cotton land in Mississippi below Vicksburg. I plant every acre of it; and I raise sugar in Louisiana."

"I hope you're not a slaveholder, sir," said my mother.

"O, I've a few niggers—hardly a hundred. I've had to hire some the last season."

At the horrified looks of my mother and the painful silence of my father Mr. Bostock wiped his mouth and laughed.

"I'd like to have you come down and see how some of those lazy cattle impose upon me. But, dash it all, Amos, I haven't time to discuss the institution, and it wouldn't do, either—we should quarrel. Of course you're an abolitionist. I remember you in the old days; you were out for one. Let's talk about something else."

"You have a family, of course, Pierce?"

"My wife died a few years ago. I've one child, Coralie, a little witch of seven. I've a great house, which is run by the servants. I know all about the plantation, but I haven't much control inside. Everything is lavish, and it's a wonder to me, sometimes, that I'm not a poor man. But come down, and you'll find hospitality enough."

For more than an hour he talked, interrupted only by an occasional question or exclamation. I did not observe then—long afterward I had occasion to recall the fact—that he parried several attempts of my parents to draw him out about his deceased wife and his daughter. He talked interestingly, almost eloquently, about the cultivation of cotton, the scenes in the immense fields when the picking time arrived, the ginning, the baling and the "shooting" down the long incline to steamboat. To me it was all a new revelation; I listened with all my senses.

He turned to me briskly with the question:

"Well, my lad, how would you like to go down and see all this for yourself?"

"I say, Amos, why not send him down to me, after a few years? I'll put him in the way to be rich."

I sat with clasped hands, eagerly looking from one to the other of my parents. Their hearts were touched by the thought of parting with me, and by the generous interest of Mr. Bostock.

"I mean it, Amos. I've taken a notion to the boy, and I'd like to have him with me. To be sure, I'm a slaveholder, but there's lots of more dangerous animals in the woods than the unfortunate man who has to feed and clothe a parcel of lazy niggers. You needn't hurry; keep him a few years yet; send him to school; and by and by send him down to me, via Cincinnati, Cairo and Vicksburg. I'll take care of him, and give him such a start in the world as he'll never get up this way. I won't forget what I'm saying, Amos, neither. What do you say?"

"Your kindness quite overpowers me, Pierce. I'll think seriously of it, and talk it over with the boy and his mother."

"All right, my old friend; the thing is as good as done. Now my time is about up. Don't get crazy over politics, Amos, and don't take Dorr to your abolition meetings. Let me have a pen and ink and I'll put down my address for you."

He took from his pocket a narrow blank book, wrote rapidly upon a leaf of it, tore out the leaf, thrust it into my father's hand, and had said his farewell and was out of the house with a celerity that was really bewildering.

My father looked at the paper. It shook in his hand; he turned pale. He could not speak, but held the paper toward us. My mother took and read it, while I looked over her shoulder. The leaf was from a blank check book. On the stub he had written his address; the body was a check on a Boston bank, payable to the order of Amos Jewett for one thousand dollars!

"I can't take it—I really must not," said my father. "Dorr, go and tell him so."

I ran out of the house. Mr. Bostock was already one hundred yards off laying the lash on the horse. I shouted to him; he looked back, waved his hat to me, and disappeared over the hill.

I went back into the house and reported.

"He wants you to have it, Amos," said my father.

"May God bless his great generous heart," said my father, with much emotion. "Dorr, my dear boy, you can go to the academy now."

CHAPTER IV.

HOW I FLANKED THE DEACON.

I thought, at first, to dismiss the events of the two following chapters with a brief mention, as they do somewhat depart from the course of the narrative. But it has appeared better, on second thoughts, to withhold nothing of the circumstances attending my farewell to my northern home. And it must not be said that the character of Deacon Halleck is presented here as a type of the men of that section. Keenly do I remember the kindness, the patience, the neighborly good will and good works of the people in a community where poverty was the rule and hard toil was the common lot. Because the deacon happened to be connected in a curious way with the final severance of my home ties and old associations his picture is presented here just as he was. I suppose that his kind is not yet extinct. This is autobiography; it should be complete.

The bounty of our generous southern friend enabled me to have one precious year at the academy, some years later, and gave my father the means to replenish his poor stock and poorer farm implements. But when he told Mr. Bostock that bad luck had followed him, he spoke in prophecy as well as history. My poor father! He deserved a better fate. Misfortune followed misfortune; they came.

"Not single apies, But in battalions."

Each year the thin soil that overlaid the rocks grew more grudging in its yield; a murrain carried off the cattle; hard work and anxiety prostrated my mother, and death mercifully released her. This stroke fell in my eighteenth year. For awhile my father bore up under his accumulating load of misfortune and sorrow; but when his creditor commenced the foreclosure of the mortgage, both hope and ambition left him. He died the day after the place was sold; and if ever a man perished of a broken heart, it was he.

Twice, at his suggestion, at long intervals, I had written to Mr. Bostock to repeat our thanks for his gift and so to remind him of the poor New Hampshire lad in whom he had professed so warm an interest. Later developments caused me to recall the dates of this correspondence. My first letter was written upon my sixteenth birthday anniversary, January 1, 1858. In the due and rather slow course of the mails of that time an answer came, postmarked at the address in Mississippi which Mr. Bostock had left with us. I was at that time completing my first quarter at the academy; was eager and zealous in my studies, and it must be confessed that I was rather taken aback to discover that my correspondent was a very poor speller. But the matter of the epistle I could not have missed. It was hearty, generous, sympathetic. He reiterated all I had heard from him as to myself, five years before, and he bade me come down to him as soon as my parents would consent. My second letter was written in 1857, upon the death of my father, and advised my correspondent that both of my parents were no more. To this no answer was ever returned. I thought strangely of his silence. It troubled me much, although I attributed it to miscarriage of the mails. After the lapse of a few weeks, the desire and intention to write again grew strong. It so happened that the difficulties and annoyances of the situation in which I was placed after the death of my father caused me to defer this design; so that, when I started on my southern journey in the summer of 1858, the letter was still unwritten.

My father died soon after I became twenty years of age. For a year after—a memorable year—I was demoralized in the family of my guardian, Deacon Halleck.

Shall I attempt a pen-picture of this man? It is not possible for me to do it justice. He was something over fifty, long, gaunt and mallow, with a high-pitched, squeaking voice that dimly reached through all better sounds in the church choir. His face was thin, peaked and bloodless, his eyes restless; his hands were always moving about as if searching for more coin to add to his store. He was reported to be worth twenty thousand dollars—a large fortune for that day and place. Behind his back people called him a hard, penurious man; in public he was referred to as "our leading citizen," "a model of piety," "a pillar of religion."

In common with this man's unhappy family, I suffered all the severity of patriarchal government, and all the torments of religious fanaticism, during my sojourn in his house. At sunset of Saturday, the Sabbath was deemed to have begun, and a discipline harsher than that of the penitentiary was enforced. The Scriptures were read and expounded through Deacon Halleck's nose. Morning and afternoon the family was marshaled forth to the meeting-house on the hill, barren of shade, where the people sweltered in summer and froze in winter, as stoves in the latter season would have been deemed a suggestion of the adversary. At all times in the week levity was frowned upon and discouraged. The stray copies of the Boston papers that had been my delight were vigorously confiscated, as the deacon had not the time to go over them with the scissors and clip out the sinful paragraphs. The few volumes of history and poetry which I had accumulated by long and patient self-denial—my precious books!—were seized and put under lock and key, until this Cerberus could look them over and see if any of them were fit to escape the flames. Meantime, pending this decision, I was recommended to peruse the volumes of the deacon's small but select library, of which Baxter's "Perseverance and Rest of the Saints," the lurid sermons of Rev. Jonathan Edwards, and "Fox's Book of Martyrs," may be cited as specimens.

My existence heretofore had been one of toil and poverty; but love and kindness had lighted it. To say that I hated this new existence and its conditions, is very feebly to express my feelings.

In the December before my majority the deacon's barn, situated some distance from the house, caught fire, and was burned to the ground. It was filled with hay, part of the crop from the owner's farm, and some old disused implements, all of which were consumed. The deacon promptly collected the insurance, and it was cautiously whispered about that he had succeeded in getting his loss appraised at about double the actual amount. But people were very careful about repeating this story.

The restraint and discipline to which I was subjected brought on an explosion that winter. It was soon after my twenty-first birthday. I had been waiting a little for my austere guardian to inform me that I was no longer under his direction, when I was resolved by hook or crook to make my way to Mississippi. In the meantime I resolved upon a little unwonted personal liberty. A young people's sleighride to a tavern up in a gap of the mountains, with a supper and a dance, had been projected. I well knew it would be fruitless to ask permission; so I resolved to attend by means of that expedient which the sailors call "taking French." In other words, I climbed out of my chamber window at nine o'clock, when the family were asleep.

Disaster attended our homeward way in the early hours of the morning. The harness broke; delay attended its repair; it was long after daylight when we reached the village. I know that my clandestine absence must have been discovered, and I resolved to put a bold face on the matter. The deacon's family were at breakfast when I walked in.

The tyrant at the head of the table glared wrathfully upon me.

"Where have you been, sir?"

"Up at Saediker's, with the sleighing party."

"Wretched youth! Your depravity is astounding. I will see you in the woodshed after breakfast."

I made no reply, but ate with considerable composure, while the commiserating glances of the deacon's big boys sought my face. Sad experience told them what was coming.

The meal over, the deacon indulged in a long addendum of thanks for what we had received, mingled with phrasal denunciations of the depraved conduct of one of the family. He rose from the table and, with a motion to me, marched out into the woodshed. I followed promptly.

He reached down a great hickory limb from the shelf and, bending and trying it in his hand, he addressed me with a sternness that was seasoned with a savage kind of glee as he anticipated the diversion he was about to provide for himself.

"Dorr Jewett, take off your coat. I have too long neglected my duty. The devil is clamoring for your immortal soul. I will chastise the adversary out of you. Take off your coat."

I snatched up a heavy oak stool that stood by and put myself on the defensive.

"If you lay a hand on me I'll knock your brains out!" I roared.

He fell back aghast. I suppose the idea of resistance to his authority never entered his head.

"What do you mean, you young imp?" he stammered.

"I mean what I say. I've done nothing to be punished for; if I had, your authority over me was at an end some weeks ago. You old canting hypocrite, I defy you to touch me!"

My blood was up, and I said more than I had at first intended to. He saw that I would surely break his head if he should advance on me, and he did not attempt it. But never was man in a greater rage! His leathery face almost turned green.

"Out of my house, you young reprobate—you spawn of Bellial!" he squeaked, in a voice shaking with fury.

"I will go with pleasure. Will you send my trunk over to the tavern?"

"Yes. Clear out!"

"I want those books you took away from me."

"Take all your traps and leave!"

I turned on my heel and went into the dining-room. Bidding the family good-by, I put on my cap and went over to the tavern. I had not a cent in my pocket.

PERSONAL POINTS.

WM. CATRON, of Pulaski, was here this week.

MR. H. M. POWERS returned from Chicago Tuesday night.

MISS VIRGELINE BALLARD returned to Dillion Wednesday.

MISS ETTA YEAGER, of Boyle, is visiting her cousin, Miss Mary Bruce.

P. W. GREEN went with Cicero Reynolds home to take a big hunt with him.

MR. R. C. BRADLEY, of Harrodsburg, the lightning contractor, is attending court this week.

MR. GEORGE HIATT and wife, of Mt. Vernon, are visiting Mrs. Nannie Hiatt and other relatives here.

MR. AND MRS. JOE SEVERANCE and Sam Walton Severance went to Shelby to see the knot well tied.

MRS. LOU SHANKS returned from Shelby yesterday, where she went to attend the wedding of her niece.

MRS. W. B. O'BANNON and children went to Brodhead Wednesday to visit her brother, Mr. T. J. Frith.

W. R. FRETWELL has been made conductor on the coal train on the Clear Creek Branch.—Middlesboro News.

MRS. J. C. FLORENCE and Miss Lizzie Davison came down from Cumberland Gap Wednesday to make this their future home.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. KIRBY, of Lancaster, were over to see Mayor and Mrs. D. W. Vandever Wednesday and looked as happy as turtle doves.

THE current Illustrated-Kentuckian contains the picture of Miss Emma Gano in its galaxy of beauty. She is a daughter of Gen. Gano, of Dallas, Texas, and niece of Col. Welch, of this place.

MRS. ELIZA POSTMAN and daughter, Mrs. Lizzie McAllister, have moved to the Curtis Watts house on Lancaster street and Misses Maggie and Jennie Hocker, who purchased the house they vacated, have moved into it.

MISS ROSE JONES, of Stanford, is the pleasant guest of Misses May and Eva Talbott.—Winchester Democrat. The same paper says that Misses Jennie and Dovie Carpenter have left that city after a four years' sojourn and will probably locate at Hopkinsville.

MISS MARY CLAY THOMPSON returned to Louisville Tuesday after a delightful stay of several months with her cousins, the Misses Lackey. Miss Thompson is beautiful, winsome and lovable, and numerous hearts beat sadly as they realize that while her stay was bright and lovely, it is past.

CITY AND VICINITY.

TRADE with Danks, the Jeweler.

THE g. j. has gone. Now let the boys come home.

EVERYTHING in the jewelry line cheap for cash at Penny's.

FULL line of heating stoves just received at Farris & Hardin's.

FOR SALE CHEAP.—A traction engine in good repair. Apply at this office.

MRS. E. T. ROCHESTER will sell her furniture and other personal effects Monday.

PLEASED to show the new goods even if you don't want to buy. Danks, the Jeweler.

BE up with the times and see the beautiful display of novelties at Danks, the Jeweler's.

WE have a new and complete stock of rubber shoes for men, women and children. Severance & Son.

THE melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year, but so far November has been as bright and beautiful as October. Prof. Hicks warns us of a big storm, however, between the 7th and 10th.

OUR reporters at Mt. Vernon and Brodhead send us important items that ought to have been sent for our Tuesday's paper. We want the news when it is fresh, gentlemen, so please don't do us so again.

J. R. BAILEY bought 220 acres of land recently adjoining Shakertown, Mercer county, at $57. Part of it is the farm he was born on and now he has gone back there to live, taking with him the good wishes of many friends here.

LITTLE Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Keller, Jr., had her left arm thrown out of place yesterday and her mother thought it was broken until she brought the little one to town, when the doctor soon had the member in proper position again.

New lot of Zeigler boots and shoes just received at S. H. Shanks'.

An elegant line of wedding present very cheap at A. R. Penny's.

INDICATIONS for Friday: "Generally fair; decidedly colder by evening."

CALL and see that line of heating stoves at W. H. Wearen & Co.'s before buying.

THE McRobert house, now occupied by T. M. White, will be for rent Jan. 1. W. H. Higgins.

THE people are getting great bargains at Penny's in watches, clocks, jewelry and silverware.

At last the long-looked-for cloaks and wraps are here. Come and see them. Severance & Son.

ATTENTION HUNTERS.—A complete line of guns, rifles, loaded shells, hunting coats, all at bottom prices. W. B. McRoberts.

WE are requested to state that it is only an open session of Turnersville Literary Society to be held to-morrow night, and not an "entertainment" as stated.

THIS newspaper will be our tax book after Oct. 31st. All property, regardless of ownership, on which the taxes are unpaid, will be advertised without further notice. J. N. Menefee, Sheriff.

A STANFORD man who excused to Milwaukee, Wis., from the Fair was so anxious for his friends to know he was so far from home that he wrote to several, dating his epistles at Milwaukee, Mich. And the worst of it is that he didn't realize his mistake even when told of it.

GEORGE REYNOLDS, who was arrested in Louisville on the charge of stabbing Bully Bill Newcomb at Brodhead, an account of which is given in our letter from that place, was taken to the scene of his crime. He confessed to the officer that he committed the deed, although at first protesting that he didn't do so.

WE appeal to the democrats to go to the polls Tuesday next and vote for Miller, Helm and McClary. The two latter have no opposition but the republicans are putting in silent, but effective efforts for Lay. Every American citizen of African descent and every white republican will be out in force next Tuesday. Let the democrats be as patriotic and all will be well.

A suit for bastardy was instituted yesterday by Miss Elise Lackowitz against Wm. Hinters. The young woman claims that under a promise of marriage she yielded to the fellow's entreaties and a little one was the result. Hinters ran off when he found out the state of case and staid away till he heard the girl had married, thinking no more would be said of it, but he was mistaken, as the suit will show. Miss Elise is Mrs. Levin now and while her husband has plenty of property, he doesn't want to support a bastard.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The grand jury finally adjourned Wednesday after finding 35 indictments, embracing nearly every offense known to the statute books, including incest. Green Guest, a Crab Orchard negro, was indicted for that crime on the oath of his daughter, Annie, who swore that he had forced her repeatedly to submit to his embraces. J. H. Carter was indicted for keeping his store open on Sunday. If Mr. Carter can be convicted of this nearly every store-keeper in the county will be liable to prosecution for the same offence. The larger number of indictments as usual are for violating the liquor laws.

The suit of Isaac Hamilton against Engineers Napper, Keyer, Martin, Burgess, Stevenson and Meals for $648 for a hall he built for them and which they refused to take because it was not erected according to contract, resulted in a hung jury after occupying the court for four days and the jury being held for 24 hours longer. There were only 11 in the panel and they stood eight for the engineers and three for Mr. Hamilton. There were nearly a dozen lawyers in the case and that accounts for the length of the trial and the mystification of the jury.

W. S. Burch having passed a satisfactory examination, was granted license to practice law. He is a bright young man and we hope he will succeed in making himself famous and wealthy in his profession.

The case of W. B. Smith for embezzlement has been on trial for the last two days. Proctor & Idol, the Danville sewing machine men, had him indicted for misappropriating $163 of their funds and there has been several continuances in the case. Mr. Idol tells us that his firm has lost $5,000 to $7,000 by agents and unless some of them can be convicted they will have to quit business. The same firm had E. M. Cole indicted at this court for stealing $200 from them, but he has skipped to West Virginia.

—Squire J. P. Land died suddenly at his home near Moreland, Monday night of apoplexy, aged 71. He was an honorable, upright man and had the respect and confidence of his community. A wife and four children survive him.

—H. J. Tilford, head of the firm of Bartley, Johnson & Co., large Louisville whisky dealers, is dead of typhoid fever.

—Sir John Abbott, the famous Canadian statesman, is dead.

MUSIC.

(To the Editor Interior Journal.)
The most popular of all the arts is the art of music, yet it is the one most abused. The reason for this being the fact, is that its high meaning is so little understood. It is considered so much in the light of an amusement and so little as a means of education that its serious purpose is lost sight of, even by musical students and teachers. What is this art to which students are devoting so much time? Wherein consists its great power? Many definitions of music have been given, but they are without exception imperfect. The power of music is so great that in the legends of all nations the invention of the art is ascribed to the Gods. The Grecians attributed peculiar powers to certain keys; some were suited for peace, some for war. The invention of music is recorded in the 4th chapter of Genesis. If intended only for an amusement, if it has not a higher mission, why does the Bible mention its origin?

The power of music was early felt and appreciated. David played before Saul to drive away the evil spirit. When God gave the Decalogue, lightning was seen and loud thunder heard, but above all, we are told, were heard trumpet sounds. There are numerous other instances recorded in the Bible where music was used in connection with Divine manifestations. But leaving the good Book, let us hear what men of genius say of this art. Shakespeare's works are full of allusions to music. In the 12th Night the duke says to his musician:

Give me some music; that piece of song, That old and antique song we heard last night; Me thought it did relieve my passion much; More than light airs and recollected terms, Of these most brisk and giddy paced times.

Although little of the science of music was known at that time, we might learn from Shakespeare and use only that which is good, avoiding the popular and that intended only to amuse.

The Reformation was not only a revival of religion, but also an awakening of song. It was Luther who laid the foundation for German musical art. Out of the German Chorales, many of which were written by Luther, grew Bach and Handel. Their compositions, although written nearly two centuries ago, still preserve their charm. The popular song, such as "After the Ball," pleases for the time; it is hummed, whistled and sung in all keys, tempi, times and intensities, then follows another which passes through the same stages, to be worn out and cast away. Ask at your music store for songs popular fifty years ago and you will find that the music dealer cannot accommodate you. Ask for Handel's "Messiah," which was written by a composer who lived two centuries ago and you can have it in any form. When Handel was told by his sovereign that the performance of the "Messiah" had afforded him much pleasure, the composer replied: "Your Majesty, I did not intend to amuse or afford pleasure, I meant to make the world better." In his Oratorios Handel left his noblest legacies to the world. The first time the "Messiah" was given in London, in 1741, the audience arose and remained standing during the Hallelujah chorus, so moved were they by this soul inspiring music.

Handel has shown us the solemnity and grandeur of music; Beethoven, its depth, its majesty, its immortality; Schumann, its romance; Chopin, its poetry and tenderness.

The great composers were men of noble souls; their music lifts us to a higher sphere as we listen to the beatings of their own hearts. This soul language utters what words cannot express: Well did Shakespeare say to Jessica:

Such harmony is in immortal souls, But while this muddy vesselure of decay Does close it in, we cannot hear it.

Let us accept music as a most precious gift and let our highest and holiest feelings be expressed by this noble, grand, and as we learn from Revelation, this eternal art.

Stanford Female College, Nov. 1.

Guaranteed Cure.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell you Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition: If you are afflicted with a Cough, Cold or any Lung, Throat or Chest Trouble and will use this remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We would not make this offer if we did not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied upon. It never disappoints. Trial bottles free at A. R. Penny's drug store. Large size 50c and $1.

A Leader.
Since its first introduction, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor until now it is clearly in the lead among pure medical tonics and alteratives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant; it is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. It will cure Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation and drive Malaria from the system. Satisfaction guaranteed with each bottle or the money will be refunded. Price only 50 cents per bottle. Sold by A. R. Penny, Druggist.

Are your children subject to croup? If so, you should never be without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is a certain cure for croup, and has never been known to fail. If given freely as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent its attack. It is the sole reliance with thousands of mothers who have croupy children, and never disappoints. There is no danger in giving this Remedy in large and frequent doses, as it contains nothing injurious. 50 cent bottles.

For sale by W. B. McRoberts, Druggist, Stanford.
Mr. W. M. Terry, who has been in the drug business at Ellettsville, Ky., for the past twelve years, says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives better satisfaction than any other cough medicine I ever used. There is a good reason for this. No other will cure a cold so quickly as this one. It cures a preventive and cure for croup; no other affords so much relief in cases of whooping cough. For sale by W. B. McRoberts, Druggist, Stanford, Ky.

THE LAST OF THE FAIR.

Any I. Man Sees the Curtain Fall on The Great Show.
CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Anybody that has been here for the last week and does not believe that the "Windy City" is the right name for it is hard to convince of an absolute fact. The crowd of visitors in the city is still immense and will be for several days yet, though 1,200 trains are going out heavily laden with human freight every 24 hours. What a fearful responsibility the train dispatchers have had resting on their shoulders since the Fair began! The train we came over on last week like all the rest was crowded with passengers who expected momentarily to get into a wreck, on the least signal of which there would have been an impromptu prayer meeting when every one aboard would have been more anxious to take part than in the case in the regular weekly prayer meetings in Stanford.

Harvey Helm began shaking hands with every man he met as soon as we struck this crowded city, but when I reminded him that he was out of his district he gave the boys a rest, though at times afterwards the fact that he is a candidate was manifested similarly.

Last Sunday an excursion steamboat from Chicago to Milwaukee, Wis., 85 miles, on Lake Michigan, had passengers on board from every State in the Union, except Vermont. There were about 2,700 in all and seasickness seemed to be popular. About half the number were decidedly and distinctly articulating "New York" at the same time. If it makes one any sicker than did this to sail on the ocean, you'll please excuse all of us from taking a sample. We thought our time had come. One of the many pleasing features of the trip was the singing of "Old Kentucky Home" by a lovely quartette of young ladies from Barbourville, Ky., the 2,700 voices joining in the chorus with an enthusiasm that made it appear that the whole crowd was from the Blue Grass State. The finest residence in the world, it is said, is in Milwaukee, owned by the well-known German brewer. The people spread on style thick and fast and nothing hardly but a coach and four goes. The horses all look like Kentucky thoroughbreds.

I witnessed the closing exercises of the Fair at Music Hall yesterday afternoon, which consisted only of a prayer or two and the passing of resolutions, etc. The assassination of Mayor Harrison Saturday evening caused the omission of an elaborate programme that had been arranged and the occasion was to have been a grand jubilee.

Those who did not see the wonderful World's Fair can never hope to have the faintest idea of its magnitude and as to what a conglomeration there is in the eternal fitness of things. SRETAW.

LONDON, LAUREL COUNTY.

—Mrs. W. B. Catching is down with pneumonia. Miss Mary Duff, one of the Laurel Seminary teachers, is down with typhoid fever. J. D. Pittman is getting along very well with a case of typhoid. The Knights of Pythias furnish nurses who are in constant attendance.

—Matt Weaver, brother of W. D. Weaver, county superintendent, died at his home in Bushes Monday night with the prevailing disease. Ed Adams, of color, a respectable plasterer, died in London Wednesday night with the same disease. Typhoid is epidemic in Laurel.

—Mr. J. F. McQuary, people's candidate for the Senate, was announced to speak here Wednesday, but the crowd was so small that he adjourned to Pittsburg to meet a larger audience the same night, the 14 present agreeing to go along and hear him and Brother Dyche cross lanes.

—A. R. Dyche, candidate for senator, and E. F. Johnson, candidate for county school superintendent, were advertised to speak at M. J. Stansberry's, Tuesday. P. F. Stillings and the writer went to hear what the gentlemen had to say, but as there were only two present besides Squire Stansberry's family the speaking was postponed forever.

—Bent on killing himself because he had had trouble in his family, Henry Dummerfruit, aged 60 years, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., climbed a tree and tying a rope around his neck and the other end to a limb jumped off. The rope broke and he suffered only a broken leg and a severe choking. He then cut both wrists horribly with his pocket knife, quenching his thirst with the blood that flowed from the wounds. This did not kill him and he then with a pointed stick stabbed himself in the abdomen repeatedly, tearing his entrails. He became unconscious from this, during which he was found by his family.

—At Orlando, Fla., a negro tried to assault Miss Lillie Lambach, but she was an usually stout woman and was too much for him. He then tried to choke her but her strength was too great. Finding that he could not accomplish his purpose, he tried to cremate her by throwing oil on her and setting fire to her clothing. Help arrived at this juncture and the girl was saved. The negro escaped.

—Mrs. Hiram Brittain, wife of a prosperous farmer living near Marlboro, O., last week presented her husband with twins. About 18 months ago triplets were born to this couple, making a net increase of five in the family within a period of 1 1/2 years.

FUNNY TEAM OF GEESE.

How a Virginia Gentleman Rides Through the Air.
—Isn't this a funny team of geese? It belongs to a man down in Orange, Va., named Dr. McBride, who caught five wild geese and "broke" or trained them to drive in harness. He says they pull a little boat which he has built for himself through the water very rapidly, and that he is going to make a balloon like that shown in the picture. But perhaps that won't work.

Dr. McBride writes to a Louisville paper:

"Last winter I made of light, well-seasoned wood a little frame with steel runners—a tricycle sleigh—and made a mile and a quarter per minute on the ice, riding in a circle. The feeling of going at that rate through the open air is something grand and wonderful. The wind whistling by your ears like a tornado, causing the tears to flow thick and fast, made it necessary for me to use a glass over my face to keep from freezing."

Mines Under the Sea.
We have all heard about the British coal and iron mines, the galleries of which extend far out under the Atlantic ocean, but there are, perhaps, very few Americans that know that the most extensive under-ocean mining operations in the world are carried on along the Pacific coast of this continent. At Nannaimo, B. C., there is a coal mine, the shaft of which extends several hundred feet below the ocean bed at that point. All the galleries of the mine, aggregating something like twelve miles in length, are entirely under the ocean.

A Nice Distinction.
Timmins—Can your daughter play the piano?
Robbins (wearily)—I don't know whether she can or not, but she does!

The best plaster.—Dampen a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bind it over the seat of pain. It is better than any plaster. When the lungs are sore such an application on the chest and another on the back, between the shoulder blades, will often prevent pneumonia. There is nothing so good for a lame back or a pain in the side. A sore throat can nearly always be cured in one night by applying a flannel bandage dampened with Pain Balm.

TO All Tax-Payers.

The 1903 Taxes are now past due and will be collected in the Sheriff's office at the court-house and by special appointments as prescribed by the new revenue law. Deputy Sheriff G. P. Newland will be in Crab Orchard every Saturday. I or my deputy will be in my office at all times and as advertised by Sheriff's official notices. The new form of Sheriff's book-keeping has rendered it impossible for us to canvass for taxes this year, as we have heretofore done; so all taxes will be collected strictly in conformity to the new revenue law. Every tax-payer whose tax remains unpaid after November 1st will find his property or lands advertised without further notice. The financial crisis which now exists makes it absolutely necessary that I collect every dollar of the 1903 taxes, as I can not expect that help from the Banks which has heretofore caused me to be lenient with the tax payers. Please profit by this and settle at once. Respectfully,
J. N. MENEFEE, S. L. C.
